Our speaker will be John Vanston. John was at our March lunch. John will discuss his experience being as close to any nuclear explosion as an American man has been, and will then initiate a discussion with us on the current nuclear weapons situation and actions and policies that might minimize the probability of a nuclear catastrophe. John suggests some members might like to look at "The Seventh Decade: The New Shape of Nuclear Danger" by Jonathan Schell.

John is a West Point grad with an M.E. from Columbia and a Ph.D. from UT, both in Nuclear Engineering. He promises his talk will NOT be technical. We will have a brief handout for you before John speaks and a longer one after he speaks. In case any of you think John might in any way be radioactive, John, his children, and his grandchildren are all healthy -- perhaps contrary to what the second handout might lead you to think.
